Diagram illustrating the components of Culture:

- Language
- Communication
- Courtesies
- Rituals
- Roles
- Expected behavior
- Values
- Thoughts
- Manners of interacting

The central concept is CULTURE, represented by a globe made of various national flags.

If an individual's identity is centered around their culture, then the individual is no longer an individual – even if they wear different clothes and accessories.

No one wants to walk the planet alone but these groups are divisive by default. You can't scream white/black/female/male/gay/straight/Christian/Muslim pride without it putting other members of the population in tribal mode, usually the most prominent adversarial group. i.e. Blue Lives vs Black Lives(no such thing as Blue lives anyway as employment is a choice), Christianity vs Islam, female vs male, etc. Religion is a socially conditioned choice to set mental processing aside. There is a sort of comfort in the irrational but only because ignorance can be bliss. You should not be proud of things you cannot help such as being white/black/female/male/gay/straight, etc. Pride is for accomplishments. If you are proud of what genitalia you like, what geographic boundary you popped out of the vagina in, what color the bag around your bones is – you are intellectually defective.

Social customs have people doing ridiculous things that they would not do otherwise were they not bound in such conformist garbage. Such as Christians and their symbolic cannibalism(saltines). Such as Muslims and their wudu Macarena. Such as nationalists and their flag, song, hand salute, and boot worship. Lost, scared people wanting you to join them in their retardations so they don't feel lost and scared by themselves. Two phanerons agreeing on a thing makes that thing a reality. A flag worshiper is a coward even if they are a physical fighter. Anyone can hit someone, not everyone can intellectually defend themselves. Picking on a religious nationalist is like picking on the handicapped kid...because he is the handicapped kid. You can show him some of his favorite things in the world(statistics and data) but he'll never get it and he'll just say you're doing magic or you're satan or something. You can be stupid but not worship flags, politicians, symbolism, zombies, or police as the fearful stupid do. You can be stupid but not beg rich suits to dictate every aspect of our existence with their militant stormtroopers as the fearful stupid do.

'Social divisions' refers to regular patterns of division in society that are associated with membership of particular social groupings, generally in terms of advantages and disadvantages, inequalities and differences.

I submit that overall, social bonds and individual expression would be stronger were we not influenced by flags, chants & rituals, nationalism, religion, religious nationalism, the appeal to tradition, expected roles, conditioned values/paradigms, conditioned fear, etc. Humans love to scream how intelligent they are as a species yet most are 1st century mental invalids that have access to 21st century technology. They still think a zombie was born to a virgin, walked on water, and generated sustenance from nothing. They still think a man was eaten by a whale but came back to his friends. They still think a man's strength was lost when he cut his hair. The absurdities are endless.

After years of trying to change people's minds, Bonhoeffer came home one evening and his own father had to tell him that two men were waiting in his room to take him away.

In prison, Bonhoeffer began to reflect on how his country of poets and thinkers had turned into a collective of cowards, crooks and criminals. Eventually he concluded that the root of the problem was not malice, but stupidity.

BONHOEFFER'S LETTERS FROM PRISON

In his famous letters from prison, Bonhoeffer argued that stupidity is a more dangerous enemy of the good than malice, because while "one may protest against evil; it can be exposed and prevented by the use of force, against stupidity we are defenseless. Neither protests nor the use of force accomplish anything here. Reasons fall on deaf ears."
